

Privacy Policy

Although I, Yosuke Amijima, is never collecting any information of the access history and your affiliate, the providers of free web-hosting I am using do collect some information. I could access, but I will not. Never.

It means you could secretly cheat and claim that you have independently programmed some of the codes in here, especially to add some functions to commercial software. That kind of wrong move, however, will make you in a big trouble academically and commercially because this site is enough famous in Japan to distinguish your free-ride activity and my work.

Privacy is often ignored in academic world in particular, but I do care and I think it is a minimum baseline for freedom of speech. I am absolutely willing to respond to your question or suggestion in any kind of anonymous forms. Please feel free to send me email. I do not get track of your email and its affiliate.